The government should have never entered in the suit. Microsoft is a great company. It employs many people and it provides great products. No one is tied to the company with a cord. If someone doesn't want to buy the product he/she doesn't have to buy it. The government should stay out of these things and not punish success. If the government officials are jealous of Bill Gates' success they should learn to live with it! There is no crime and was no crime!
